评论与奖项

"This is a dynamite dry white Rhone wine. It's a blend of Grenache, Viognier, Marsanne and Roussanne. It sees no oak, so only the fruits has the stage. It's bone dry; it has a finish that's tart bitter like rose water. The flavors are tropical with a slam of minerality and floral tones. It's true from start to finish. Pair it with salads, seafood and grilled chicken."

"I wish regulations prohibited the use of Reserve when that's all the producer makes (or exports). And the fact is, this wine needs no labeling hype. It's very good. Made from the typical blend of white Rhone grapes--Viognier, Marsanne, Roussane, Bourblanc and Grenache Blanc--it's floral and refined. Hints of honeysuckle are a foil for the delicate stone fruit notes. It avoids the heaviness that can plague whites from the southern Rhone. It would be equally at home before as with a meal."

"Best buy."

This is rich and refreshing at once, like a cold, juicy white peach, succulent and mouthfilling. For scallops in a curried cream sauce."

"Fresh and breezy, with green plum and melon rind notes that stay focused through the light-bodied finish."

"The 2009 Perrin et Fils Cotes du Rhone Reserve blanc (50% Grenache Blanc and the rest Viognier, Roussanne and Marsanne) exhibits fresh aromas of quince, honeysuckle and citrus in its medium-bodied, nicely textured, dry, crisp personality. It is meant to be consumed over the next 1-2 years."
